Moon Missile Slowed 99,000 Miles in Space

By RALPH DIGHTON
PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—The camera-carrying Ranger 7 spacecraft probably will hit its target area on the lighted side of the moon, a space scientist said today after an apparently successful midway maneuver of the craft.

Dr. William H. Pickering, director of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, which is guiding the 806-pound vehicle on its 228,000-mile voyage, told a news conference, "I think we'll get in the target area" — a 300-mile-wide plain just above the equator in the center of the left half of the moon.

The area, called the Sea of Clouds by ancient astronomers who imagined the flat spaces on the moon were bodies of water, was chosen as a photographic target because it could be a good landing spot for U.S. astronauts within a few years.

Pickering, obviously elated, said: "It appears the spacecraft did what it was supposed to do, but we must analyze tracking data for several hours before we can determine the impact area precisely."

He promised an announcement later today.

Ranger 7, latest attempt of the space agency to take close-up pictures of the surface of the moon, was launched from Cape Kennedy Tuesday morning.

Major event in the hour-and-a-half midcourse maneuver was a 67-mile-an-hour kick in the pants designed to bring Ranger 7 on course toward its target area.

The kick — a 50-second burst by its steering rocket — was ordered at 3:27 a.m. Pacific Daylight Time by Jet Propulsion Laboratory scientists after hours of tracking indicated Ranger 7 would buttonhook past the leading edge of the moon and impact on the dark side.

On radio signals from earth, the 806-pound spacecraft pirouetted briefly for better aim, then ignited a small rocket in its base.

In effect, the brief burst slowed by 67 m.p.h. the 4,000 m.p.h. speed that would have carried Ranger 7 some 240 miles left of the face of the moon, as viewed from earth.

Laboratory officials said it would be 10 to 12 hours before they could determine the accuracy of the maneuver, executed more than 99,000 miles out in space, and predict the site of impact.

They added, however, that all systems on the spacecraft apparently have functioned well so far on the 69-hour, 228,522-mile voyage.

Seven Hurt in Accident Near Ozan

An auto driven by Jeffery Stewart, Flint, Mich., Negro, failed to negotiate the "Goodlett" curve just north of Ozan last night, ran into a corn field, veered back toward the highway and struck down a power line pole.

Seven persons in the car, all Negroes, were injured, two critically. The driver sustained an eye injury. His wife, severe lacerations; his two children, Marilyn, 10, and Bernadette, 5, severe lacerations; a niece, Earline, 8, was critically injured; a nephew, Junior, 9, is still unconscious and another nephew, Dennis, 3, was not badly hurt. All were taken to a Nashville hospital. Four were released this morning.

State Policeman Guy Downing and Deputy Sheriff Herbert Griffin investigated. Officers said the auto was a total loss. Power was disrupted in the area for several hours.

Twice the officers were nearly run down by approaching autos, and three of the drivers were arrested and charged with reckless driving.

Charge Follows Accident Here

About 5:30 p.m. yesterday at the L & A crossing an auto driven by Edward L. Easter of Junction City, Ark. ran into the back of another auto driven by Bobbie Gaze of Magnolia.

Both cars were considerably damaged. City Officer Jarvis charged Easter with following too close.

Some House Incumbents Lose Seats

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Youthful John A. Sink of Newport upset veteran Rep. Lonnie Etheridge of Weldon for Jackson County's seat in the Arkansas House of Representatives in Tuesday's Democratic primary.

Sink polled 3,606 votes to 2,456 for Etheridge, a legislative leader for eight years.

Etheridge was one of several incumbent House members who lost their seats Tuesday. Several others were forced into runoffs.

One who survived was Perry County Rep. Paul Van Dalsem. He defeated Len Blacklock of Perryville 1,251 to 595 in the Democratic primary. He will face Billy Gipson of Gipson in the general election. Gipson led 155 to 2 in the Republican primary.

Here are the results of the House races, by counties:

Garland: Reps. Ray S. Smith Jr. and Nathan L. Schoenfeld won re-election. Smith had 5,595 votes to 3,490 for Eliza M. Young. Schoenfeld had 5,866 to 3,898 for George H. Grayson.

Montgomery: Rep. Ode Madrox 1,192; Harold Scott 808.

Bradley: Rep. Bill Wells, 2,927; Smith Seay 366, William D. Rothwell 517.

All Around Town

By The Star Staff

Reflections on yesterday's Democratic Primary election: Jimmie Griffin was awfully proud of the fact that he is the only man, at least in recent years and perhaps in history, to be elected for a fourth term as sheriff of Hempstead.

...and some of his backers were chiding him a bit because he didn't get as many votes as Gov. Faubus. ... this election was supposed to work off fairly fast and it did for a time. ... but a couple of big boxes didn't show until around 11 o'clock. ... no question about Dean Murphy's creditable showing not only in Hempstead but throughout the district. ... he has already announced his intention of running again two years from now at which time he should be very well known. ... one thing about being coroner, you are the only man in the county that can arrest any county official, including the sheriff. ... strangely enough the best race of the night was for constable of DeRoon township which was a three-way dog fight and will be on the ballot two weeks hence along with the county judge runoff. ... although some of the Democratic nominees were relaxing comfortably last night they will have a more republican opposition. ... the sheriffs race polled the most votes at 5,394, but some 2,157 eligible didn't vote at all. ... as expected Governor Faubus ran like a house afire and the final leg of the campaign completely ignored his opposition, three completely unknowns. ... however, the Governor makes no bones about fearing his Republican foe Winthrop Rockefeller in November and is planning an all out campaign. ... as of right now we suspect any candidate would like to be as popular in Arkansas as Barry Goldwater.

Harris Winner But Murphy Ran Strong

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Veteran Reps. E. C. Gathings and Oren Harris won renomination to Congress in Tuesday's Democratic primary but not before Harris got the fight of his life in the 4th District.

Nomination means election since neither has a Republican opponent.

Gathings, seeking a 14th two-year term, ran up a 10 to 1 victory margin over Mrs. Florence Clay, a Negro funeral home operator of Forrest City.

Dean Murphy issued the following statement last night: "With about two thirds of the votes in it seems that Mr. Harris has been given another two years in the national Congress. 'I am not conceding defeat now or in the morning or next month.'

"Enough of the people have supported and voted for me to let me know that we may have lost the battle but we haven't lost the war."

"Mr. Lincoln had six set backs before he was elected president. 'I am not discouraged. Nor am I necessarily disappointed, but rather pleased with the reaction the voters have given me all over the district in my first attempt to be elected to a major political office.'

"All of this makes me even more determined to keep up my fight for conservative, constitutional government and individual rights in whatever capacity I may be able to work."

"The Good Lord willing, I'll see the voters again in two years."

DEAN MURPHY

Harris won a 13th term over Dean Murphy, a truck stop operator of Hope, who stayed in the running until more than half of the returns were in.

Harris claimed victory when he led Murphy by only 4,000 votes of 106,000 reported.

Murphy issued a statement saying he was not conceding "now, tomorrow or ever" and promising to run against Harris again two years from now.

Murphy's showing was amazing for a candidate who had never made a major race.

Returns from 779 of 786 precincts in The Associated Press count gave Harris 77,004 votes

Workers Try to Rescue Five Miners

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH
CHAMPAIGN, FRANCE

(AP)—Rescue workers punched an entrance today into an underground tunnel where five miners are believed trapped to open a rescue shaft to nine trapped men found alive more than 200 feet below the surface.

The rescuers made contact through an air tube with the nine men Tuesday night, 36 hours after the cave-in in a limestone mine in the Jura Mountains of eastern France. The miners said three of their five missing companions were caught by falling rock and may have perished. They said there was no trace of the other two.

Torrential rains hampered the rescue work Tuesday, but the sky was blue today. The limestone quarry lies beneath Mt. Rivel near the Swiss border.

The hole was opened by bulldozers this morning to permit rescue teams to enter the entrance tunnel where the cave-in occurred Monday and clear away debris by hand. It was believed that the five missing men were in this gallery.

Other rescue teams were digging a 3-foot vertical shaft through the 211-foot layer of rock above the chamber where the nine known survivors were.

Drillers sank a gallery Tuesday night and exchanged signals with the miners. Then they lowered a microphone to the men by pushing through a larger pipe.

Down went food, warm clothing, hot drinks, flashlights and cigarettes. Wives and daughters spoke to the trapped men.

Moon Men to Be Puzzled About Time

By CECILIA LYNETT

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—What time will the first earth men on the moon go by?

That's perhaps a silly question, but there is a real problem—at least as top scientists see it—in getting a man from earth adjusted to time on the moon.

Man has had a biological clock built into him since his evolution. As he goes about his daily activities, his metabolism is geared to a 24-hour day.

Space medicine doctors are concerned with the lunar explorers' ability to adapt to conditions in which day and night, as we know them on earth, do not exist. For most of us, day-time and nighttime regulate our activities.

How will man adapt himself to conditions on the moon where one lunar day equals 29 1/2 earth days?

A "moon clock"—adjusted so that time on the moon can be computed exactly into the time period as time on earth—is the answer, in the opinion of Dr. I.M. Levi, astronomer and director of Philadelphia's Fels Planetarium.

He took his theories and calculations to Martin M. Decker, chairman of the board of the National Aeronautics Association and president of the Decker Corp. of Philadelphia.

Decker built the moon clock. It has two dials showing the Greenwich time on earth and the local time for a particular point on the moon.

The position of the sun at any moment, even when it is below the horizon during the lunar night, is shown on a scale which marks off the 29 1/2 lunar days to one earth day.

A calendar is incorporated in the weekend with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Hunt of Patmos.

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Moran have just returned from a visit with their son, Jack and family of San Francisco and to make the new acquaintance of the granddaughter, Melinda Lynne.

the clock to show the date on the earth which will also be considered the date on the moon.
Decker thinks the United States will be the first nation to reach the moon, and "We will be up there within the next two or three years."
"Man will reach the moon very shortly and will live on the moon the same as we have done on the arctic and the North Pole," he predicts.

Campaign Ideals May Not Last

By JAMES MARLOW

Associated Press News Analyst
WASHINGTON (AP) — From the way President Johnson and Sen. Barry Goldwater have been talking, you can get the impression the presidential campaign is going to be on a high plane, more or less. But this may not last long since neither man can predict or control the future.

Goldwater himself, in the midst of saying he would not make any personal attacks on Johnson and would campaign solely on the issues, told a news conference: "Oh, I think you'll find some brickbats flying around all over the place."

And Johnson is apparently prepared for anything that happens, while so far being bland about it all, for he told a news conference: "Most campaigns are rough campaigns and I'm an old campaigner. I've been at it 30 years."

This gives him more than twice the campaign experience of Goldwater because he was in Congress more than twice as long.

He never batted an eye—in public, that is—to Goldwater's charge that he is a "faker" and a "phony" and seemed to be trying to brush aside any thought he might retaliate in kind.

He said of his 30 years of campaigning: "One of the first things I learned—at least, as far as I'm concerned—the people are not much interested in my personal opinion of my opponent."

"The American people will make their judgments on the very statements that he may make from time to time."

There are plenty of other Democrats around to fling brickbats if Johnson won't, although it remains to be seen if he won't, particularly if Goldwater flings them.

And if Goldwater won't, his running mate for the vice presidency, Rep. William E. Miller of New York, probably will since Miller has been described as a gut fighter, a "wiry rooster" with "nothing ramby-pamby about him."

It can't be forgotten that Goldwater said one of the main issues in the campaign is the "scandal hanging over the White House." Somebody, if not Goldwater, is going to have to talk about it, since he called it an issue.

If a guess had to be made, this seems the likely one: This is going to be rougher than any campaign in memory if only because the intensity of feeling among Americans themselves seems so deep.

There was hardly deep feeling among voters over the 1960 race between Sen. John F. Kennedy and Vice President Richard M. Nixon. They weren't so far apart in their views. It was a personality contest.

It marks the most clear-cut division—which is what Goldwater said he wanted to provide anyway — between American conservatives and those of more liberal views and between those who are against big government and those who consider it a necessity in the middle of the 20th Century.

The lines have already hardened on both sides and if anyone doubts it all he has to do is talk to a dozen people and listen to the intensity of their feelings.

There was no such intensity before or even during the two campaigns between Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and Adlai E. Stevenson.

In addition to this all the unpredictable—like the turn of events at home and abroad, particularly if they're violent—could make this whole campaign boil.

Atmosphere at White House Good

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater says the atmosphere at his White House meeting with President Johnson was "very good."

"We're good friends," Goldwater told newsmen Tuesday. "We're old political friends."

The two met Friday to discuss civil rights tensions during the presidential campaign. Did they discuss anything else?

"Yes," said the Republican presidential nominee. "He warned me never to pull my dog's ears."

Stone County received its name because that's what the terrain is chiefly comprised of—Stone.

"DEAR ABBY"

FACE THE FACTS!

By Abigail Van Buren

Dear Abby: My daughter is planning her wedding. She has asked her 18-year-old cousin to be a bridesmaid. The problem is that this cousin has a 12-year-old sister who thinks she should be a bridesmaid, or have some special part in the wedding, so she can be in the wedding party, too. She has even begged to be a flower girl (She is five feet seven!) but my daughter doesn't want her. We aren't having any junior bridesmaids, so that's out. This little snip has always been jealous of her older sister and is extremely hard to handle. Her mother (my sister) has me on the telephone twenty times a day telling me that we MUST fit this child into the wedding party as she is becoming unmanageable. What do you suggest?

BRIDE'S MOTHER

Dear Mother: I suggest that you tell your sister that the bride decides who shall be in the wedding party. The 12-year-old girl needs to learn a very important lesson in life. "We can't always have what we want." Now would be as good a time as any to teach her.

Dear Abby: Here's a bit of information which doesn't amount to a "damn," but perhaps you can use it. Your correspondent who claimed that the expression, "Don't give a dam" was not improper because a "dam" was a small Indian coin, may have been right. But the origin of the "dam" used in that sense came from the old-time traveling "tinker" or fixit man. When mending pots and pans, he used a small ridge of clay around the edge of the hole of the vessel to prevent the solder from running off the area for which it was intended. The little clay ridge was called a "tinker's dam." After the hole had been mended it had no further use. Hence, the phrase. Best regards.

J. F. WEADOCK

Dear Abby: I had company last Sunday. Mrs. A. stopped by with her four-year-old son. A few minutes later Mrs. B. came with her six-year-old daughter. The children played together while we ladies talked. Mrs. A. casually said, "I hope Jackie isn't coming down with measles. He was exposed to them in our neighborhood and he does look rather feverish." Mrs. B. shot out of her chair like an electric current went through it, and then she shouted angrily at Mrs. A. "A fine time to tell me! My Janie just got over an ear infection and if she catches measles it could settle in her ear!" Then she grabbed her daughter by the arm and flew out of the door. Mrs. A., and her little boy, left shortly afterwards with tears in her eyes. That evening Mrs. A.'s husband called and said I should ask Mrs. B. to phone his wife and apologize for hurting her feelings. Well, I called Mrs. B. and gave her the message, and she said Mrs. A. owed HER an apology for exposing her child to measles. Who do you think owes whom an apology?

Man Drowns in Morilton Creek

Doyce Biggs, 42, of Scotland, Ark., drowned in East Point Remove Creek 14 miles northeast of here Tuesday.

Biggs went to the creek to get water for animals in a corral at the sawmill camp where he worked. Other workers went to the creek when he did not return. They found Biggs' cap floating in 15 feet of water. Later they found the body.

Whittington Forced Into a Runoff

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Prosecutor David Whittington of Hot Springs was forced into a runoff by Richard Hobbs of Hot Springs in Tuesday's Democratic primary.

Whittington led the ticket with 4,696 votes. Hobbs got 3,260. The third candidate, who was eliminated, picked up 2,153. He was Earl Mazander.

Whittington serves the 18th Judicial Circuit which covers only Garland County. A suit now is pending before the Arkansas Supreme Court to determine if a one-county judicial district is constitutional.

Circuit Judge P. E. Dobbs recently criticized Whittington for failing to try a number of criminal cases which had been pending on the docket for some time. Whittington countered by rebuking the judge for failing to convene a grand jury to consider the cases.

Joe Holmes of Pine Bluff defeated Donald H. Smith of Pine Bluff in a close race for the prosecutor's post in the 11th Judicial Circuit which includes Jefferson, Lincoln and Desha counties.

With all but one box reported, Holmes had 9,265 votes, Smith 9,040.

Robert Hardin of Benton overwhelmed Dorsey D. Glover of Malvern in the prosecutor's race in the 7th District. Hardin had 10,114 votes and Glover 5,859 in complete returns.

Robert Dudley of Pocahontas was an apparent victor over E. V. Hoyt of Mountain Home in the 16th District race.

With about 60 per cent of the vote reported, Dudley had 6,131 votes, Hoyt 4,751.

Results in Race for Senate Seats

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Mrs. Dorothy Allen of Brinkley won her late husband's seat in the Arkansas Senate by defeating two male opponents in Tuesday's Democratic primary.

Mrs. Allen will be the Senate's only female member when she takes Pos. 2 in the 26th District. Her husband, Sen. Tom Allen, held the post many years until his death last year.

With just one box unreported in the district's four counties, Mrs. Allen had 7,515 votes to 4,282 for Lester Graves of Stuttgart and 2,617 for Forrest Long of Brinkley.

Sen. Robert Harvey of Swifton won a third term, defeating Forrest Jeffrey of Batesville in the 18th District. Near complete returns gave Harvey 6,556 votes, Jeffrey 3,374.

Sen. Graham Nixon of Conway was forced into a runoff in the 14th District by the man he beat for the job four years ago, former Sen. Guy Jones of Conway. Jones led the ticket with 7,857 votes, Nixon had 5,388 and a third candidate, Ammon Ward of Damascus polled 2,980.

Sen. John O. Moore of Texarkana, seeking a second term, was apparently defeated by Bob Douglas of Texarkana in the 8th District. With 52 of 66 boxes reported, Douglas had 4,627 votes, Moore 3,650.

Sen. Dan Sprick of Little Rock apparently won re-nomination to Pos. 3 in the 15th District, defeating Cal Ledbetter of Little Rock. Sprick must face Republican Wayne Babbitt in November.

Reports from 58 of 95 precincts gave Sprick 11,261 votes and Ledbetter 9,055.

Rep. Jim Brandon and Everett Tucker Jr. faced a runoff for Pos. 2 in the 15th District. A third candidate, John Yancey was eliminated.

Returns from 58 of 95 precincts gave Brandon 8,236 votes, Tucker 7,208 and Yancey 5,155.

TO THE VOTERS OF HEMPSTEAD COUNTY:

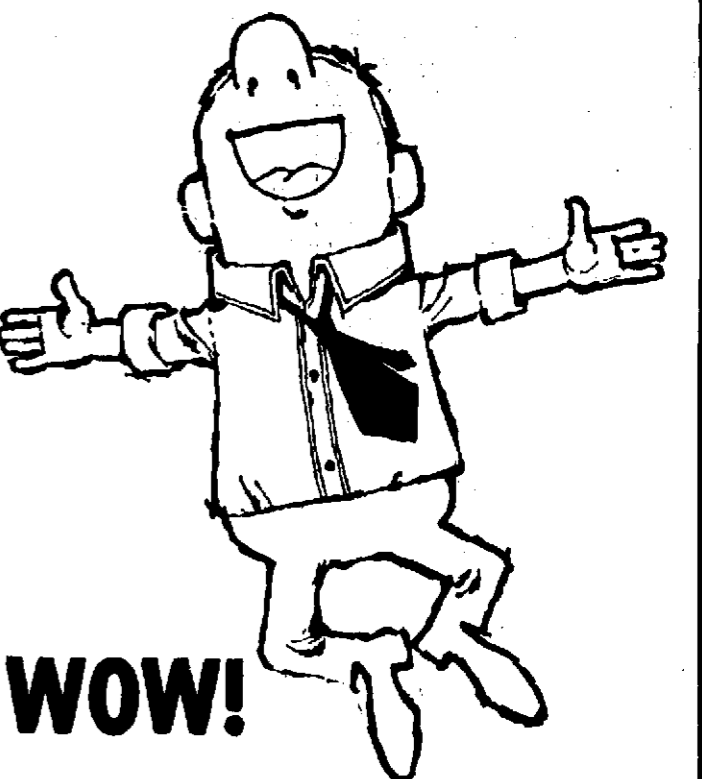

I am exceedingly grateful for the confidence you have shown in me by again electing me your Sheriff and Collector.

Until we can see each of you personally, please accept this as a great big "Thank You" from myself and my family.

Bob Thomas at the Movies

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-TV Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) - It was a social event that almost went without notice, despite its significance in the history of Hollywood's cafe society. The occasion: a 21st birthday party for Cheryl Crane, given by her mother, Lana Turner.

Cheryl and her friends were rocking to the watusi until early Monday morning on the Sunset Strip, where Lana once ruled as queen of filmland's night life. The blonde star joined in the gyrating dance with professional style. But most of the time she watched as the youngsters vibrated to the beat of strumming guitars. This was Cheryl's night.

"For weeks I've been working on every tiny detail," Lana remarked over the party noise. "The flowers, the buffet, the entertainment - I took care of everything. I even invited every guest by telephone."

The party reflected careful planning. One hundred and fifty guests, all screened by private detectives at the door, poured into the Galaxy, one of the strip's night spots that has sprung up to satisfy the watusi craze. Each table was decorated with sprays of red and pink daisies and carnations, and balloons festooned the walls. Pink carnations spelled out "Happy Birthday, Cheryl" over the bar.

Lana, trim in a clinging white lace dress, greeted each guest. Her daughter, in a low-backed red formal, also visited every table. Cheryl, who has been sheltered since the 1958 slaying of Johnny Stompanato, is now a statuesque brunette beauty, five inches taller than her mother.

Cheryl's stabbing of Stompanato, underworld figure who had been dating her mother, was ruled justifiable homicide after she testified he had threatened her.

Man Arrested on Murder Charge

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) - Hubert L. Cokes, 64, a former Hot Springs, Ark., resident, was arrested here Saturday night on a preliminary charge of murder.

Cokes, an Evansville oilman, was arrested in the death of Keith Kallio, 46, of Washington, Kallio, a sporting goods salesman and former Washington policeman, bled to death after the main artery in his left kneecap was severed by a shot from a .357 magnum revolver, authorities said.

An attorney for Cokes said his client would plead self-defense. He said Kallio and Cokes played golf here Saturday afternoon, then went to Cokes' home. The attorney, Marion Rice, said the men argued and "Kallio attempted to harm Cokes."

ened Miss Turner. Thereafter she was involved in a series of minor scrapes that kept her name in the news. Friends and family say that she now has settled down and become a model citizen.

Most of the guests were Cheryl's contemporaries, plus some of the younger acting crop, such as Elizabeth Ashley and television stars Gardner McKay, Clint Eastwood and Doug McClure. An old friend of the family also dropped in - Frank Sinatra.

Cheryl's father, Steve Crane, was in attendance, as was Lana's No. 5 Fred May, who is often her date despite their divorce.

BEST FRIEND'S WIFE
By Vesta M. Kelly

I said, "Stop and I'll clean the windshield."
Biff grunted. "Shoulder looks bad. Wait until we hit a straight stretch and I'll pull off."
I shifted my weight against the door and looked at my companions. Dusk and the storm had turned the car into a world of its own, a world that smelled of wet wool and leather; the faint scent of Linda's perfume. I felt the car's movement, the joggle of wheels over the country road, the softness of Linda's weight against me.

My best friend, Biff, his big shoulders tense, leaned over the steering wheel, straining to see the road through the half-obscured windshield.
Biff's wife, Linda, sat between us, her eyes closed. All day she had been quiet and moody. Now she seemed completely unaware of the difficulty Biff was having with the driving.
All in all, it had been a lousy day. The hunting wasn't a success. All day, rain soaked us. Now, coming home in the early dusk, the rain had turned to sleet.

I heard Biff's indrawn breath, felt his instinctive twist of the wheel. I pivoted to the fan-shaped opening where the wiper fought the rain. A beat-up old truck was bearing down on us - straight down the middle of the road - its headlights gleaming like a tomcat's eyes.
I felt the car lurch as the shoulder gave way. We seemed to climb, clawing along the edge for a moment before the car pitched into the ditch. It slammed into the opposite bank and rolled back against the shoulder.

When it came to rest, I found Linda in my arms. The door behind me was sprung. I pushed it open and crawled out pulling Linda after me. I stood up cautiously. I didn't seem to be hurt.
"Are you all right?" I asked Linda.
"I think so... Biff?"
"The truck was gone. Only a receding sound mingled with the hiss of falling sleet. The car's wheels were spinning around and around, crazily, in the half-light.
I crawled back into the tilted car. "Biff?"
"I'm caught," he grunted. "Are you hurt?"
"I don't think so. Maybe if you pull."

"I reached for his hand. "Linda...?"
"She's okay. Come on, let's get you out of there."
I pulled with all of my strength while he struggled to get free. It wasn't any use. Somehow the impact had wedged Biff's big body between the door and the steering column. Something was pinning him there.

"The door! The one against the bank. If we could get it open."
"Hurry," Linda said. "The engine's on fire."
I ran around the car, slipping on the mud. If we could push the car onto its wheels. "Get at the door..."
"Help me, Linda. Push!"
I pushed and strained with all my strength. I couldn't quite make it. Linda was crying now. "What'll we do?" she sobbed.

I could smell smoke. Time was running out. Suddenly, I knew what I was going to do.
"Biff," I shouted. "We can't get you out and it's okay. Linda and I are in love. This makes it easy for us."
With an ugly roaring sound, he began to struggle. Heaving his great strength against the side of the car. Making it rock with his effort.

"Now, Linda, now!"
We both pushed. The car rocked forward, dropped onto its wheels. Miraculously, I could open the door.
Biff came out as big and sturdy as a mountain. He caught me on the side of the head with the big fist. I went down into the half-frozen mud.
"Get up and I'll give you a rother."
But I lay still in the sleety mud, feeling warm and happy. He was out! I hoped the car wouldn't blow up before we got this thing cleared up and got out of there.

Linda was hanging onto Biff's arm. "No, Biff, no! Don't you see, he had to make you mad enough to help us get you out! Oh, darling, you're safe."
Then, she was in his arms and he was kissing her.
"I wouldn't for the world have had it any other way."
We all tried. But, the friendship just never was the same again. Having put it into words, I realized that for me, it was true. I did love Linda.
But, Linda loved Biff!

So that's the way the cookie is crumbled. And that's why I'm sitting here on a sunshiny California patio - alone, reading a letter from Biff and Linda back home - together.
Well, I don't know. Here comes that blonde from across the hall with a pot of coffee. I don't think I'm going to be alone for long.

I said, "Stop and I'll clean the windshield."
Biff grunted. "Shoulder looks bad. Wait until we hit a straight stretch and I'll pull off."
I shifted my weight against the door and looked at my companions. Dusk and the storm had turned the car into a world of its own, a world that smelled of wet wool and leather; the faint scent of Linda's perfume. I felt the car's movement, the joggle of wheels over the country road, the softness of Linda's weight against me.

My best friend, Biff, his big shoulders tense, leaned over the steering wheel, straining to see the road through the half-obscured windshield.
Biff's wife, Linda, sat between us, her eyes closed. All day she had been quiet and moody. Now she seemed completely unaware of the difficulty Biff was having with the driving.
All in all, it had been a lousy day. The hunting wasn't a success. All day, rain soaked us. Now, coming home in the early dusk, the rain had turned to sleet.

I heard Biff's indrawn breath, felt his instinctive twist of the wheel. I pivoted to the fan-shaped opening where the wiper fought the rain. A beat-up old truck was bearing down on us - straight down the middle of the road - its headlights gleaming like a tomcat's eyes.
I felt the car lurch as the shoulder gave way. We seemed to climb, clawing along the edge for a moment before the car pitched into the ditch. It slammed into the opposite bank and rolled back against the shoulder.

When it came to rest, I found Linda in my arms. The door behind me was sprung. I pushed it open and crawled out pulling Linda after me. I stood up cautiously. I didn't seem to be hurt.
"Are you all right?" I asked Linda.
"I think so... Biff?"
"The truck was gone. Only a receding sound mingled with the hiss of falling sleet. The car's wheels were spinning around and around, crazily, in the half-light.
I crawled back into the tilted car. "Biff?"
"I'm caught," he grunted. "Are you hurt?"
"I don't think so. Maybe if you pull."

"I reached for his hand. "Linda...?"
"She's okay. Come on, let's get you out of there."
I pulled with all of my strength while he struggled to get free. It wasn't any use. Somehow the impact had wedged Biff's big body between the door and the steering column. Something was pinning him there.

"The door! The one against the bank. If we could get it open."
"Hurry," Linda said. "The engine's on fire."
I ran around the car, slipping on the mud. If we could push the car onto its wheels. "Get at the door..."
"Help me, Linda. Push!"
I pushed and strained with all my strength. I couldn't quite make it. Linda was crying now. "What'll we do?" she sobbed.

I could smell smoke. Time was running out. Suddenly, I knew what I was going to do.
"Biff," I shouted. "We can't get you out and it's okay. Linda and I are in love. This makes it easy for us."
With an ugly roaring sound, he began to struggle. Heaving his great strength against the side of the car. Making it rock with his effort.

"Now, Linda, now!"
We both pushed. The car rocked forward, dropped onto its wheels. Miraculously, I could open the door.
Biff came out as big and sturdy as a mountain. He caught me on the side of the head with the big fist. I went down into the half-frozen mud.
"Get up and I'll give you a rother."
But I lay still in the sleety mud, feeling warm and happy. He was out! I hoped the car wouldn't blow up before we got this thing cleared up and got out of there.

Linda was hanging onto Biff's arm. "No, Biff, no! Don't you see, he had to make you mad enough to help us get you out! Oh, darling, you're safe."
Then, she was in his arms and he was kissing her.
"I wouldn't for the world have had it any other way."
We all tried. But, the friendship just never was the same again. Having put it into words, I realized that for me, it was true. I did love Linda.
But, Linda loved Biff!

So that's the way the cookie is crumbled. And that's why I'm sitting here on a sunshiny California patio - alone, reading a letter from Biff and Linda back home - together.
Well, I don't know. Here comes that blonde from across the hall with a pot of coffee. I don't think I'm going to be alone for long.

Rhode Island Liberal Is Keynoter

By JACK BELL
WASHINGTON (AP) - Sen. John O. Pastore, passionate liberal orator from Rhode Island, was chosen today as keynote speaker for the Democratic National Convention.

Tapped by President Johnson, Pastore, 57, was approved by arrangements committee for the convention opening Aug. 24 in Atlantic City.

The selection was in line with Johnsonian strategy of trying to nail down the industrialized East as part of the drive to thwart Republican Sen. Barry Goldwater's bid for the presidency.

Of Italian descent, Pastore has carved himself a respected place in the Senate with intimate knowledge of legislation and his fiery willingness to take on all comers in debate. Pastore has been a strong

Angel Hurler Stops Yanks With 2 Hits

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

Dean Chance doesn't know it, but he's in trouble.

He's a Yankee-killer, full-fledged, thorough-going and heavily credentialed. He's the best in the world at the obscure art, succeeding Frank Lary in the position.

And you know what happened to Lary. He's with the Mets. And that, old buddy, is trouble.

Chance, however, has no sign of the arm trouble that sent Lary, one-time Yankee nemesis, from the Tigers to the minors and eventually to Casey Stengel's hapless heroes.

The Los Angeles Angel right-hander stopped New York's American League leaders on just two hits Tuesday night, 3-1, snapping the Yanks' five-game winning string but not disturbing their leading margin.

One of the Yanks hits was a homer by Jim Fregosi, who hit for the cycle, lashing a two-run homer in third and adding a triple, double and single.

The Yankees, however, retained a full-game lead over Baltimore, 7-4 losers to Minnesota. Detroit beat Chicago 6-3, Washington edged Cleveland 4-3 and Kansas City nipped Boston 2-1 in the other American League games, all at night.

In the National League, Philadelphia's Phillies lengthened their lead to 1½ games over the Giants with a 4-0 conquest of San Francisco in the first of a three-game series at Philadelphia.

Don Drysdale and his Los Angeles Dodger mates shut out the New York Mets 9-0. Milwaukee edged Cincinnati 3-2 and St. Louis beat the Chicago Cubs 12-7 in 10 innings. Houston at Pittsburgh was postponed because of rain.

Chance, now 10-5 for the season including five in a row, struck out eight and walked only two. Aside from Mantle's 20th homer, the only other New York hit was a single by Clete Boyer.

Detroit got maximum mileage out of only four hits in its comeback triumph over the White Sox. Gates Brown tied it for the Tigers with a two-run homer in the sixth, George Thomas added the go-ahead run on a sacrifice fly and a double by Al Kaline, a single by Norm Cash, a stolen base and an error added two more in the eighth.

Minnesota, loser of 14 of its last 16 games, revived its power in the decision over Baltimore. Zoilo Versalles cracked two home runs, Jimmie Hall had a two-run blast and Don Mincher a solo drive. Jerry Adair and Brooks Robinson had homers for the losers.

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Leni Clendinin checked Denver on seven hits and Arkansas rolled to a 9-1 Pacific Coast League baseball triumph here Tuesday night.

The Travelers rapped three Denver pitchers for 13 hits, and Norm Gigon was the only Arkansas player who failed to get on base with his bat.

Singles by Wayne Gratam and Adolpho Phillips and a throwing error by Lou Klimchuck got Arkansas a first-inning run. A double by Lee Elia and singles by Clendinin and Bill Sorrell got another in the second.

Fred Walters hit his second homer of the season for a run in the sixth inning. Sorrell singled with two men on for another run.

A two-run single by Elia and a double by Walters highlighted a five-run, four-hit seventh inning by Arkansas.

Denver's run came in the fourth when Clendinin walked Purnell Goldy, hit Phil Roof and gave up a single to Sandy Alomar.

Bunning Slips and So Does Phil Chances

By HAL BOCK

Associated Press Sports Writer
Jim (Perfect Game) Bunning is slipping and if he keeps it up the Philadelphia Phillies are liable to slide right into their first National League pennant in 14 years.

Bunning, you see, is undergoing the jinx that strikes so many no-hit pitchers. The poor fellow has struggled through July with just two victories. He can't seem to beat anybody anymore—that is anybody except the second place San Francisco Giants.

The lanky ex-American Leaguer baffled the Giants for 61-3 innings Tuesday night before leaving for Jack Baldschun, who fed a double play ball to Willie McCovey to wrap up a 4-0 Phillie victory in the opener of a crucial three-game series.

It was only Bunning's third victory in the five weeks since he set down two New York Mets in a row. Two of these victories have come against the Giants and Phillie Manager Gene Mauch couldn't have hoped for a healthier hex.

The Giants couldn't do a thing with Bunning for 5 1-3 innings and visions of another no-hitter (only three pitchers have ever put two classics together in one summer) had Phillie fans excited. But Hal Lanier's single broke the spell in the sixth.

Gus Triandos, meanwhile, provided his batterymate with all the runs he needed in the fourth inning with a three-run homer, his first circuit in three months and only his second of the season.

After Lanier's hit, Bunning surrendered a bunt single to Matty Alou in the eighth. Willie Mays opened the Giant ninth with the third hit and when Orlando Cepeda singled one out later, Mauch called for Baldschun.

The reliever needed just one pitch to chalk up his 11th save and preserve Bunning's 10th victory. McCovey's double play grounder ended it and extended Philadelphia's National League lead to 1½ games.

Elsewhere in the NL, Milwaukee edged Cincinnati 3-2, Los Angeles routed New York 9-0, and St. Louis topped Chicago 12-7. Houston and Pittsburgh were rained out.

In the American League, Los Angeles defeated New York 3-1, Detroit whipped Chicago 6-3, Minnesota dropped Baltimore 7-4, Washington nipped Cleveland 4-3 and Kansas City beat Boston 2-1.

Cincinnati's Jim O'Toole had stifled the Braves on one hit, Mike de la Hoz' fourth homer, when an electrical storm delayed the game 45 minutes; Sammy Ellis took over the Reds' pitching and the Braves promptly clipped him for four hits and two runs in the seventh to win it.

Don Drysdale, who five days ago suffered a hairline fracture of his right thumb, hurled his fourth shutout of the season blanking the Mets.

The Cardinals pushed five runs across in the 10th inning with Mike Shannon's two-run homer climaxing the surge against the Cubs.

Legislature Dean Defeated

MARIANNA, Ark. (AP)—The dean of the Arkansas Legislature, Rep. W. L. Ward Sr. of Lee County, was defeated in Tuesday's primary election.

Ward ran third. His two opponents will meet in a runoff Aug. 11.

J. B. Smith of Marianna led the ticket with 1,079 votes. Eugene Hampton polled 823. Ward got 563.

Ward, now 82, has been in the legislature for most of the sessions since 1917 when he became a senator. He served six sessions in the Senate, 12 in the House.

Known in his youth as a flowery orator, Ward lost little of his charm through the years. His colleagues in the 1963 session honored him with a seat on the Legislative Council.

backlog of unfilled orders has grown, lengthening delivery times. This in itself prompts some manufacturers into ordering now, knowing they may have to wait to install the new machines they want for their modernization or expansion plans.

Machine tool making tends to be an up-and-down business. In bad times, or when a business downturn is expected, orders fall off fast as manufacturers pull in their horns.

Today with the economy in general growing steadily, the urge to buy tools to make the machines that turn out consumer products is mounting. This apparently is the main drive behind the June spurt in tool ordering.

Another is the continuing trend toward more mechanization, to bypass costly man labor and make more goods with less effort, faster, and in greater quantity.

Whatever their motives—more money in the till, better current sales, expectations of still better business conditions to come—corporations have been steadily raising their sights this year on their expansion plans. The sums that are tagged to flow into new plants and equipment this year are now put at $44 billion by the Department of Commerce.
